Journal Title: The Old Northwest

Volume: 2
Issue: 2
Month/Year: 1976
Pages: 131-140

Article Author: Rubenstein, Bruce A.

Article Title: Justice Denied: Indian Land Frauds in Michigan, 1855-1900

Imprint:

Call #: F476 .OS5 v.2 1976
Location: MAIN
Item #:

reference@law.msu.edu

Law College Reference Law College Reference
(reference)
115 Law College Building
East Lansing, MI 48824-1048

MSU Departmental Account Number to be charged:
31-4147

Photoduplication Services – charge of $5.00 per article (fee changed as of Sept. 1, 2004)
INDIANS SUFFERED AND LOST IN MICHIGAN, 1855-1900

JUSTICE DENIED: INDIAN LAND FRAUDS

THE OLD NORTHWEST
Indian Land Frauds

The Old Northwest
Indian Land Frauds

The Old Northwest

Since the land office regulations were cut down to their bone, the decision to authorize the agents to dispose of the lands was made by the Secretary of the Interior. The agents were responsible for the disposal of the land and they had to ensure that the land was sold at fair prices. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible.

The land office regulations were cut down to their bone, the decision to authorize the agents to dispose of the lands was made by the Secretary of the Interior. The agents were responsible for the disposal of the land and they had to ensure that the land was sold at fair prices. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible.

The land office regulations were cut down to their bone, the decision to authorize the agents to dispose of the lands was made by the Secretary of the Interior. The agents were responsible for the disposal of the land and they had to ensure that the land was sold at fair prices. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible.

The land office regulations were cut down to their bone, the decision to authorize the agents to dispose of the lands was made by the Secretary of the Interior. The agents were responsible for the disposal of the land and they had to ensure that the land was sold at fair prices. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible.

The land office regulations were cut down to their bone, the decision to authorize the agents to dispose of the lands was made by the Secretary of the Interior. The agents were responsible for the disposal of the land and they had to ensure that the land was sold at fair prices. The settlers were usually more than willing to pay the prices asked, as they were in a hurry to get the land and they wanted to start farming as soon as possible.
INDIAN LAND RAIDS

The Old Northwest
The project I would be doing the following year.

40th Annual Meeting, October 1976. A call to order was made by the Chairman, and the attendance of the Board of Directors and Officers was reported. The 1976 Annual Report of the Board of Directors was presented and approved. The Annual Meeting adjourned.

NOTES

He also touched on the importance of the Board in the project I would be doing the following year.

The project I would be doing the following year.

The project I would be doing the following year.
William Joseph Snelling's Tales of the Northwest (1889)