I. INTRODUCTION

UNITE HERE International Union (“Union”) alleges that the Shingle Springs Band of Miwok Indians (hereinafter the “Tribe”) violated a neutrality agreement entitled “Memorandum of Agreement” (hereinafter the “MOA”) by discharging two Tribe employees for supporting its organizing efforts. However, the MOA only provides the framework for the representation process and may set forth provisions only to take effect if the union obtains majority status and becomes the exclusive representative of employees. Accordingly, the MOA cannot be used to regulate the terms and conditions of the Tribe’s employees. Indeed, neutrality agreements like the MOA are not collective bargaining agreements and hence do not confer any rights to the former employees.

The Union’s motion for judgment on the pleadings must be denied because the MOA does not permit arbitration of employment termination decisions. Further, the Tribe has never agreed that the MOA would permit arbitration of employment matters such as the purported wrongful termination of two former Tribe employees (which are claims subject to Tribal law). There are no provisions in the MOA regarding employee discipline, termination, or applicable remedies such as back pay and reinstatement. . The MOA further confirms that the Tribe’s sovereign immunity waiver does not and cannot give rise to any claim by these two employees, who are not even parties to the MOA. However, the Union in an attempt to circumvent the Tribe’s own internal processes, seeks direct legal redress on behalf of these two former Tribe employees, who may already bring employment claims through Tribal law.

II. RELEVANT STATEMENT OF FACTS<sup>1</sup>

The Tribe and the Union entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (“MOA”) that that sets forth the parameters for the representation process which is expressly limited to the following three purposes:

- To ensure an orderly environment for the exercise by Bargaining Unit Employees of their rights under the TLRO;

<sup>1</sup> The Union’s “Statement of Undisputed Facts” completely ignores the Tribe’s affirmative defenses and central disputed material facts and legal issues that underpin the parties’ dispute.

- 1 • To avoid strikes, picketing, and/or other adverse economic or public relations activity
- 2 directed at the Tribe in the event the Union decides to conduct an organizing
- 3 campaign among Eligible Employees; and
- 4 • Implementation of a Card Check Recognition Process pursuant to the terms of this
- 5 Agreement. (Complaint, Exhibit A, MOA, Recitals.)

6 The MOA also includes a limited dispute resolution provision and states, in relevant part as 7 follows:

8 The Parties agree that any disputes over the interpretation or 9 application of this Agreement shall be submitted [...] to expedited and 10 binding arbitration before an arbitrator selected from the TLP. The 11 arbitrator shall not modify, add to or subtract from this Agreement.
12 The arbitrator shall follow the arbitration procedures prescribed in the 13 TLRO. The arbitrator shall have the authority to order the non-compliant party to comply with the Agreement. The Parties hereto agree to comply with any order of the arbitrator, which shall be final and binding, and shall be enforceable as provided in the TRLO.
(Complaint, Exhibit A, MOA Section 10.)<sup>2</sup>

14 The MOA contains no provisions regarding employee discipline and/or termination and is 15 silent on any employee remedies such as back pay and/or reinstatement. (Answer, Seventh and 16 Eighth Affirmative Defenses.) The MOA is further devoid of any provision authorizing arbitration of 17 employment termination decisions. (Answer, Sixth Affirmative Defense.)

18 On or about November 18, 2015, the Union sent the Tribe a letter falsely alleging that the 19 Tribe violated Section 5<sup>3</sup> of the MOA by terminating employee Christopher Garrigues. Mr.
20 Garrigues, however, was terminated because he falsified documents and then lied to his manager, 21 which has nothing to do with the MOA. (Complaint, ¶ 18, Exhibit C.)

22 On January 7, 2016, the Tribe and the Union mediated multiple issues, but did not resolve the 23 dispute regarding the discipline and/or termination of any Tribe employees. (Complaint, ¶ 23.)

26 <sup>2</sup> The Union's motion asserts that the Tribe's denials to Paragraphs 16, 17, 18, 26, and 28 of the 27 Union's Petition to Compel Arbitration do not "fairly respond to the substance of the allegation" and 28 should be deemed admissions. However, these Paragraphs simply reference documents which speak for themselves.

<sup>3</sup> Section 5 requires the Tribe to remain neutral with respect to an employee's decision on Union representation. Section 5 contains no language regarding the hiring or firing of employees.

1 On or about February 4, 2016, notwithstanding the mediation and in recognition of the 2 inherent issues with negotiating over the terms and conditions of employment, the Tribe advised the 3 Union that proceeding with dispute resolution concerning the employment terminations of two 4 employees was tantamount to a grievance arbitration which would violate tribal and federal law.
5 Indeed, the MOA does not govern employee discipline or the employment termination of Tribe 6 employees. The MOA is further silent on any grievance procedures or accompanying remedies for 7 employee disciplinary actions, such as back pay and/or reinstatement. For these reasons the Tribe 8 informed the Union that Tribe employee terminations are outside the scope of the MOA and the 9 arbitration provision contained therein. The Tribe further informed the Union that it could not agree 10 to arbitrate the termination of any employee until the Union obtained majority support as provided in 11 the MOA. Indeed, the Union was acting as if it already had majority support and was representing 12 the employees of the Tribe when in fact it was not representing any of the Tribe's employees.
13 (Complaint, ¶ 27, Exhibit G; Answer, Affirmative Defenses.)

14 The Tribe's February 4, 2016, letter also informed the Union that the MOA is not a collective 15 bargaining agreement and therefore parties could not arbitrate an employment termination decision 16 nor does Union have the right to negotiate any of the terms and conditions of Tribe employees . The 17 Tribe further reminded the Union that the decision to terminate an employee was a personnel matter 18 that could only be governed by the Tribe's tribal court and not by the MOA's arbitration provision.
19 Moreover, the terminated Tribe employees are not parties to the MOA and therefore have no 20 standing to enforce the Tribe's sovereign immunity waiver contained in Section 14(b) of the MOA.
21 The Tribe has not waived its sovereign immunity with respect to any action or proceeding by any 22 employee. (Complaint, ¶ 27, Exhibit G; See Answer, Affirmative Defenses.)

23 In response to the Union's petition to compel arbitration of the Tribe's termination of the two 24 employees, the Tribe filed an Answer denying that the MOA supported the claims alleged in the 25 Union's petition, that the MOA applied to termination decisions, and that the termination decisions
26 are not subject to arbitration. (ECF No. 18; Answer ¶ 1.)<sup>4</sup>

27 <sup>4</sup> The Tribe also filed a related declaratory relief complaint seeking a determination regarding the 28 scope of the MOA's arbitration provision and whether it applies to employment terminations. (CITE DOCKET; see Notice of Related Cases Order (ECF No. 13)). On July 18, 2016, the Union moved to

III. LEGAL ARGUMENT

A. The Union is Not Entitled to Judgment on the Pleadings Because the Tribe's Answer Raises Issues of Fact and Affirmative Defenses That Defeat Recovery.

Judgment on the pleadings is only appropriate when, even if all material facts in the pleading under attack are true, the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fleming v. Pickard (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F3d 922, 925.<sup>5</sup> All inferences reasonably drawn from these facts must be construed in favor of the responding party. Id. at 925; R.J. Corman Derailment Services, LLC v. International Union of Operating Engineers, Local Union 150, AFL-CIO (7th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 643, 647. Thus, a plaintiff is not entitled to judgment on the pleadings if the answer raises issues of fact or an affirmative defense which, if proved, would defeat plaintiff's recovery. General Conference Corp. of Seventh-Day Adventists v. Seventh-Day Adventist Congregational Church (9th Cir. 1989) 887 F2d 228, 230.

While the Union alleges that the Tribe's employment termination decisions are governed by the MOA and must be arbitrated (Complaint, ¶ 1), the Tribe asserts that its employment decisions are clearly not subject to the MOA and are therefore not subject to arbitration. (Answer, ¶ 1). Because there are disputed material facts at issue and affirmative defenses that would defeat the Union's request for relief, judgment on the pleadings must be denied.

I. The Court, and Not an Arbitrator, Must Determine Whether Employment Termination Decisions are Within the Scope of the MOA's Arbitration Provision.

The Union's sole claim for relief is an order compelling arbitration of the two employment terminations pursuant to the MOA. However, the Supreme Court has made clear that the question of arbitrability under an arbitration agreement is for the courts to decide (and not the arbitrator). The dismiss the Tribe's complaint. (ECF No. 10.) The Tribe filed an opposition, arguing that this Court has jurisdiction to rule on the Tribe's complaint because the dispute presents an issue of substantive arbitrability – namely, that the Tribe never agreed to arbitrate termination decisions and nothing in the MOA requires arbitration of these decisions. (ECF No. 13). The motion to dismiss is pending before this Court.

<sup>5</sup> Analysis under rule governing motions for judgment on the pleadings is substantially identical to analysis under rule governing motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Estom Yumeka Maidu Tribe of the Enter. Rancheria of California v. California (E.D. Cal. 2016) 163 F. Supp. 3d 769.

1 Union's reliance on United Steelworkers of Am. v. American Manufacturing Co., (1960) 363 U.S.
 2 564 is misplaced. In a companion case issued the same day, United Steelworkers of Am. v. Warrior
 3 & Gulf Nav. Co. (1960) 363 U.S. 574, 583, ft. 7, the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that "under 4 both the agreement in this case and that involved in American Manufacturing Co., 363 U.S. 564, the 5 question of arbitrability is for the courts to decide." Accordingly, the court (and not an arbitrator) 6 must first determine whether the reluctant party has breached a promise to arbitrate. See id. ("For 7 arbitration is a matter of contract and a party cannot be required to submit to arbitration any dispute 8 which he has not agreed so to submit.) Questions of arbitrability are within the exclusive province of 9 courts, not arbitrators, and therefore only this Court can determine if the MOA requires arbitration of 10 the two employment terminations. See United Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co., 363 U.S.
 11 574, 583 n. 7 (1963); Beer, Soft Drink, Water, Fruit Juice, Local Union 744 v. Metropolitan 12 Distributors, Inc., (7th Cir.1985) 763 F.2d 300, 302-03 (courts ascertain whether the subject matter 13 of a particular dispute is covered by the parties' arbitration agreement).

14 Nothing in the MOA requires arbitration of the Tribe's personnel decisions nor is there any 15 provision within the MOA concerning employee discipline and/or termination. (See Answer, Sixth 16 and Seventh Affirmative Defenses.) The MOA does not contain a grievance procedure or 17 accompanying remedies for employee disciplinary actions, such as back pay and/or reinstatement.
 18 (See Answer, Eighth Affirmative Defense; Litton Fin. Printing Division v. NLRB (1991) 501 U.S.
 19 190, 209 (although the court may not decide the merits of the grievance, the court "must determine 20 whether the parties agreed to arbitrate this dispute, and [the court] cannot avoid that duty because it 21 requires [the court] to interpret."))<sup>6</sup>

 24 <sup>6</sup> The U.S. Supreme Court in Litton "appeared to instruct that the judicial responsibility to determine arbitrability 25 takes precedence over the general rule to avoid consideration of the merits of a grievance[.]" IBEW v. GKN Aero. N.
 26 Am., Inc. (8th Cir. 2005) 431 F.3d 624, 528. The Union relies on United Steelworkers of Am. v. Am. Mfg. Co. (American 27 Manufacturing Co.) (1960) 363 U.S. 564, 568 for the proposition that submitting this dispute to arbitration is proper. As 28 an initial matter, American Manufacturing Co. is inapplicable here because there is no collective bargaining agreement at issue in this action. Further, the Tribe alleges that there is no obligation to arbitrate because termination decisions do not fall within the scope of the MOA. This is indisputably a question of arbitrability and within the exclusive province of courts. Only this Court can determine if the MOA requires arbitration of the two employment terminations. See United Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co. (1963) 363 U.S. 574, 583 n. 7.

1 In spite of the MOA's clear limitations, the Union attempts to circumvent longstanding 2 federal labor law claiming that the Tribe's employment decisions are subject to the MOA's
3 arbitration provision. However, the Union's claim is not supported by the MOA or federal labor law:
4 the Tribe's employment decisions do not and cannot fall within the scope of the MOA's arbitration
5 provision. Granite Rock Co. v. Int'l Bhd. Of Teamsters (2010) 561 U.S. 287, 287 (courts determine 6 threshold issues as the scope of the arbitration clause and its enforceability, as well as whether and 7 when the parties agreed to the clause).

8 It is a fundamental labor principle that "arbitration is strictly 'a matter of consent' and thus 9 'is a way to resolve those disputes – but only those disputes – that the parties have agreed to submit 10 to arbitration[.]'" Granite Rock Co., 363 U.S. at 299 (internal citations omitted). In determining the 11 arbitrability of the dispute, courts must also consider the history of the parties' own interpretations of 12 the agreement. Commc'ns Workers of Am. v. Pac. Nw. Bell Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1964) 337 F.2d 455, 13 459. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit warned that:

14 [The presumption regarding arbitrability] recognizes that if evidence 15 of intent is of the 'most forceful' character, it need not be confined to 16 the language of the contract; and it would appear clear that the 17 decision whether such evidence dehors the agreement is of sufficient 18 forcefulness is for the courts and not for the arbitrator. The Court, 19 then, has not announced a rule of evidence; it has simply warned that 20 the persuasive power of the evidence must be such that the truth 21 emerges with forceful clarity. We apprehend, however, that it is still 22 for the courts to search out the truth upon this issue.

19 Id.

20 Federal courts must also place practical and realistic construction on labor agreements, 21 giving due consideration to the purpose which they are intended to serve. See California Trucking 22 Asso. v. Corcoran (N.D. Cal. 1977) 74 F.R.D. 534 (courts engage in contract interpretation 23 principles in determining arbitrability); see also El Vocero De Puerto Rico v. Union De Periodistas 24 (D.P.R. 1981) 532 F. Supp. 13 (in context of labor agreement, great weight should be given to 25 interpretation of the agreement by parties thereto, and what parties actually intended is of the utmost 26 importance).

27 The Tribe never, at any point, agreed that its personnel decisions, including employment 28 terminations, would be governed by the MOA because to do so would violate federal law by giving

1 the Union the right to negotiate over the terms and conditions of employees. (See Answer, Fourth
2 and Fifth Affirmative Defenses.) This is exactly why the Tribe and the Union agreed to limit the 3 MOA to the following express purposes:

- 4 • To ensure an orderly environment for the exercise by Bargaining Unit 5 Employees of their rights under the TLRO;
- 6 • To avoid strikes, picketing, and/or other adverse economic or public relations 7 activity directed at the Tribe in the event the Union decides to conduct an 8 organizing campaign among Eligible Employees; and
- 9 • Implementation of a Card Check Recognition Process pursuant to the terms of 10 this Agreement.

11 (See Complaint, Exhibit A, MOA, Recitals (D).)

12 The Tribe and the Union never agreed to bargain and/or negotiate over the terms and 13 conditions of employment and the MOA certainly contains no provision suggesting otherwise. (See 14 Answer, Tenth Affirmative Defense.) The Union knows full well that under a collective bargaining 15 agreement a discharged union employee must first exhaust the grievance procedures before seeking 16 direct legal redress. Edwards v. Teamsters Local Union No. 36, Bldg. Material & Dump Truck 17 Drivers (9th Cir. 1983) 719 F.2d 1036, 1038 (citing Republic Steel Corp. v. Maddox (1965) 379 U.S.
18 650). The MOA is clearly not a collective bargaining agreement and it certainly does not contain 19 any grievance procedure and/or applicable remedies for any Tribe employees including former 20 employees Garrigues and Bond. (See Answer, Eighth Affirmative Defense.)

21 If former Tribe employees Garrigues, Bond, (or any other Tribe member for that matter)
22 wanted to challenge an employment decision made by the Tribe, they must comply with the Tribe's 23 Employment Code.<sup>7</sup> (See Answer, Ninth Affirmative Defense.) The MOA does not govern the 24 terms and conditions of their employment with the Tribe and Garrigues and Bond are not even 25 parties to the MOA. The Union is clearly attempting to bypass Tribal law attempting to arbitrate the 26 terms and conditions of employment on behalf of these two former Tribe employees. (See Answer,

27 <sup>7</sup> Title 6 of the Tribe's Employment Code allows employees to bring a discrimination, retaliation, and/or 28 harassment claim to Tribal Court or arbitration.

1 Thirteenth Affirmative Defense.) The Union’s overbroad interpretation of the MOA would 2 conceivably allow the Union to arbitrate any and all disciplinary actions or termination decisions by 3 the Tribe, which the Tribe would never allow and clearly the MOA does not permit. See California
 4 Trucking Asso. v. Corcoran (N.D. Cal. 1977) 74 F.R.D. 534 (courts engage in contract interpretation 5 principles in determining arbitrability).

6 The Union’s proposed arbitration of these two Tribe employment claims would also violate 7 the Tribe’s right to sovereign immunity that is reserved in the MOA. (See Answer, Fourteenth 8 Affirmative Defense.) The MOA confirms that the sovereign immunity waiver by the Tribe “shall 9 not be enforced by any other party other than the Parties to the Agreement and shall not give rise to 10 any claim or liability to any other third party other than the Parties hereto.”<sup>8</sup> (Complaint, Exhibit A, 11 MOA, Section 14(b).) Thus, former Tribe employees Garrigues and Bond have no standing under 12 federal law or the MOA to pursue any employment-related claims against the Tribe. (See Answer, 13 Thirteenth and Fourteenth Affirmative Defense.) If Garrigues and Bond desire to bring claims 14 against the Tribe arising out of their employment they must first exhaust the Tribe’s internal dispute 15 resolution process in accordance with Tribal law (supra).

16 The express language of the MOA and bedrock principles of federal law demonstrate that the 17 Tribe never agreed to arbitrate employment termination decisions and no reasonable interpretation of 18 the arbitration provision suggests otherwise. California Trucking Assoc. v. Corcoran (N.D. Cal.
 19 1977) 74 F.R.D. 534. Indeed, neutrality agreements such as the MOA generally provide the 20 framework for the representation process and may set forth provisions only to take effect if the union 21 obtains majority status and becomes the exclusive representative of employees. See Snow & Sons 22 (9th Cir. 1962) 134 N.L.R.B. 709, enforced, 308 F.2d 687 (the NLRB will enforce voluntary 23 recognition agreements where the employer agrees to a private alternative to a Board election and, as 24 a result of that alternative procedure, has knowledge of the union's majority status); Hotel &
 25 Restaurant Employees Union Local 217 v. J.P. Morgan Hotel (2d. Cir. 1993) 996 F.2d 561 26 (employer and union entered into contract to govern conduct during union organizational campaign).

27 <sup>8</sup> Federal law prohibits suits against Indian Tribes, unless the Tribe (or Congress) has clearly and unequivocally 28 expressed consent to suit (which the Tribe has not done here). See Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez (1978) 436 U.S. 49, 56, 58-59 (Indian tribes may be sued only where the tribe or Congress unequivocally expresses consent to suit).

1 However, unlike collective bargaining agreements, neutrality agreements like the MOA are not 2 collective bargaining agreements and cannot be treated as such. (Ibid; see Answer, Second, Third, 3 Fourth, and Fifth Affirmative Defenses.)

4 As set forth above, the Union has raised affirmative defenses and disputed facts, taken 5 together with reasonable inferences drawn from those facts, defeat the Union’s requested recovery
6 for an order compelling arbitration. Accordingly, the Union’s motion for judgment on the pleadings 7 must be denied.

8 B. The Union’s Motion to Strike Must Be Denied Because the Union Failed to 9 Demonstrate that the Tribe’s Affirmative Defenses Lack Merit.

10 Rule 12(f) motions to strike are only granted when a defense is either (1) insufficient as a 11 matter of law or (2) insufficient as a matter of pleading. Dodson v. Strategic Restaurants Acquisition 12 Co. II, LLC (E.D. Cal. 2013) 289 FRD 595, 603. Affirmative defenses will be stricken “only when 13 they are insufficient on the face of the pleadings.” Heller Financial v. Midwhey Powder Co., 883
14 F.2d 1286, 1294 (7th Cir.1989). An affirmative defense is presumed legally sufficient unless shown 15 it “lacks merit under any set of facts the defendant might allege.” Id. at 603 (internal quote omitted).

16 Importantly, motions to strike are not favored and thus, not frequently granted “unless it is 17 clear that the matter to be stricken could have no possible bearing on the subject matter of the 18 litigation.” Colaprico v. Sun Microsystems, Inc. (N.D. Cal.1991) 758 F. Supp. 1335, 1339. When a 19 court considers a motion to strike, it “must view the pleading in a light most favorable to the 20 pleading party.” In re 2TheMart.com, Inc. Sec. Lit., (C.D. Cal 2000) 114 F.Supp.2d 955, 965. A 21 court must deny the motion to strike if there is any doubt whether the allegations in the pleadings 22 might be relevant in the action. Id. In other words, a motion to strike should be granted only if “it 23 appears to a certainty that plaintiffs would succeed despite any state of the facts which could be 24 proved in support of the defense and are inferable from the pleadings.” Operating Engineers Local 25 324 Health Care Plan v. G & W Const. Co. (6th Cir. 2015) 783 F3d 1045, 1050 (emphasis added 26 and internal quotes omitted).

1                   1.        The Tribe's First and Tenth Affirmative Defenses

2                   The Tribe's first affirmative defense alleges that the Petition fails to contain facts sufficient 3 to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The Tribe's tenth affirmative defense alleges that 4 there was no breach of the MOA and therefore no basis for requiring the parties to arbitrate. The 5 Union failed to demonstrate in its moving papers that these defenses are insufficient as a matter of 6 law. See Oracle America, Inc. v. Micron Technology, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2011) 817 F.Supp.2d 1128, 7 1132 (plaintiff must show that there is no issue of fact that might allow the defense to succeed, nor 8 any substantial question of law; and that plaintiff would be prejudiced by inclusion of the defense).

9                   Indeed, as set forth more fully above, the Tribe sufficiently alleges (among other defenses) 10 that it did not agree to arbitrate termination decisions and therefore could not have breached the 11 MOA; that termination decisions do not fall within the scope of the arbitration provision; that the 12 Union lacks standing to arbitrate employment termination decisions; that proceeding with an 13 arbitration regarding employment termination decisions violates federal and tribal law; that the 14 Union is not the exclusive bargaining representative of employees and therefore cannot negotiate the 15 terms and conditions of employment; that the MOA is completely devoid of any provisions 16 regarding employee discipline/termination and applicable remedies for employee disciplinary 17 actions, or authorizing arbitrations of employment termination provisions; and, that the Tribe's 18 sovereign immunity is limited to compelling arbitration or confirming an arbitration award. See 19 supra, Part A.

20                   Accordingly, the first and tenth affirmative defenses should not be stricken.

21                   2.        The Eleventh, Twelfth, and Fourteenth Affirmative Defenses

22                   These affirmative defenses allege that employee discipline and/or termination decisions are 23 intramural personnel matters, that the Tribe has a recognized right to self-governance, and that the 24 Tribe's waiver of sovereign immunity is limited to compelling arbitration and confirming an 25 arbitration award.

26                   While it is true that the tribal self-government exception is designed to except purely 27 intramural matters such as conditions of tribal membership, inheritance rules, and domestic relations, 28 (see Donovan v. Coeur d'Alene Tribal Forum (9th Cir. 2009) 751 F.2d 1113, 1116), these are not the 1 only matters covered by this exception. Snyder v. Navajo Nation (9th Cir.2004) 382 F.3d 892, 895.

2 Here, the Union attempts to interfere with the Tribe’s own internal processes regarding employment
3 claims as set forth in tribal law. (See supra, Part B(5).) Indeed, a tribe’s self-governance is a 4 necessary corollary to the common-law sovereign immunity possessed by a tribe. Three Affiliated 5 Tribes of Fort Berthold Reservation v. Wold Eng'g (1986) 476 U.S. 877, 890.

6 The Union argues that it seeks to compel the Tribe to keep the promises it made in the 7 MOA.<sup>9</sup> However, the Tribe never agreed to arbitrate employment termination decisions. The Union 8 further argues that this is an action to confirm an arbitration award so the waiver of sovereign 9 immunity applies. First, this matter concerns is a petition to compel arbitration and nothing more.
10 Second, the MOA confirms that the sovereign immunity waiver by the Tribe “shall not be enforced 11 by any other party other than the Parties to the Agreement and shall not give rise to any claim or 12 liability to any other third party other than the Parties hereto.”<sup>10</sup> (See Complaint, Exhibit A, MOA, 13 Section 14(b).) However, the Union in an attempt to circumvent the Tribe’s own internal processes, 14 seeks direct legal redress on behalf of two former employees, who are not even parties to the MOA 15 and have no standing under federal and tribal law.

16 3. The Tribe’s Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Affirmative Defenses

17 These affirmative defenses allege that the MOA does not authorize arbitration of 18 employment termination decisions nor does it contain any provision regarding employee discipline 19 and/or termination, any grievance procedure, or accompanying remedies of employment disciplinary 20 actions, such as back pay and/or reinstatement. Indeed, nothing in the MOA requires arbitration of 21 employment termination decisions because the Tribe never agreed to arbitrate termination decisions.

22 Despite such forceful evidence of a purpose to exclude employment termination decisions 23 from the scope of the arbitration provision, the Union alleges (incorrectly) that the MOA requires the 24

25 <sup>9</sup> Mere legal conclusions are not entitled to the assumption of truth, on a motion to dismiss for failure 26 to state a claim. Jackson v. Barnes, 749 F.3d 755 (9th Cir. 2014), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 980 (2015).

27 <sup>10</sup> Federal law prohibits suits against Indian Tribes, unless the Tribe (or Congress) has clearly and 28 unequivocally expressed consent to suit (which the Tribe has not done here). See Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez (1978) 436 U.S. 49, 56, 58-59 (Indian tribes may be sued only where the tribe or Congress unequivocally expresses consent to suit).

1 Tribe to arbitrate the terminations of Mr. Bond and Mr. Garrigues. Longstanding principles of labor 2 law dictate that whether the parties have agreed to arbitrate employment termination decisions is 3 question of substantive arbitrability for courts to decide. Granite Rock Co. v. Int'l Bhd. Of 4 Teamsters (2010) 561 U.S. 287, 287 (courts determine threshold issues as the scope of the arbitration 5 clause and its enforceability, as well as whether and when the parties agreed to the clause). As set 6 forth above in Part A, labor arbitrators have authority to resolve labor disputes only because the 7 parties previously agreed to submit their grievances to arbitration. Gateway Coal Co. v. United Mine 8 Workers (1974) 414 U.S. 368, 374. Accordingly, “courts should order arbitration of a dispute only 9 where the court is satisfied that neither the formation of the parties' arbitration agreement nor [...] its 10 enforceability or applicability to the dispute is in issue. Where a party contests either or both matters, 11 ‘the court’ must resolve the disagreement.” Id. (Internal citations omitted.) Here, the Tribe contests 12 the scope of the arbitration provision to the termination decisions at issue here. The Union’s 13 argument that this case fails to present a dispute about substantive arbitrability is unavailing.

14 4. The Tribe’s Third, Fourth, and Fifth Affirmative Defenses

15 These affirmative defenses allege that the MOA is not a collective bargaining agreement, that 16 arbitrating employment termination decisions violate the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA”) 17 and tribal law, and that the Union is not the exclusive bargaining representative of employees and 18 therefore cannot negotiate the terms and conditions of the employment relationship. In support of its 19 motion to strike these defenses, the Union argues that an employer’s promise of neutrality does not 20 violate the NLRA and that Sections 8(a)(1) and (3) of the NLRA prohibit the Tribe from discharging 21 employees for supporting a union. However, the Tribe does not contest the propriety of the 22 neutrality provision. The Union’s reference to Sections 8(a)(1) and (3) of the NLRA are misplaced 23 as these sections do not remotely apply to the parties’ dispute in this matter. In fact, Sections 8(a)(1) 24 and (3) actually provide Mr. Garrigues, Mr. Bond, or any other Tribal employee with another avenue 25 for redress.

26 The Tribe’s position is that the NLRA proscribes employers from favoring any union that has 27 failed to demonstrate majority status and that does not represent an appropriate bargaining unit of the 28 workforce. 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(2) (it shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer “to dominate

1 or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or 2 other support to it”). The MOA expressly prohibits the Tribe from granting the Union any support 3 as it pursues majority status and attempts to gain the status of exclusive representative of an 4 appropriate bargaining unit. MOA, Section 5(b) (“for the purposes of this Agreement “Neutrality”
5 means that Manager or management shall not express any opinion for or against Union
6 representation of any existing or proposed bargaining unit composed of Bargaining Unit Employees, 7 or for or against the Union or any officer, member or representative thereof in their capacity as 8 such”). Accordingly, neutrality agreements like the MOA may not be used to regulate the terms and 9 conditions of employees in the workplace because the Union has no majority status and represents 10 no employees. See Majestic Weaving Co., Inc. of New York (1964) 147 NLRB 859, 862 (“there 11 ‘could be no clearer abridgment’ of the Section 7 rights of employees than impressing upon a 12 nonconsenting majority an agent granted exclusive bargaining status”) (internal citations omitted); 13 see also American Bakeries Co. (1986) 280 N.L.R.B. 1373, 1377 (any “bargaining prior to 14 achievement of the union's majority status is violative.”).

15 Indeed, the Union has failed to cite even one case where a court compelled arbitration of an 16 employment termination decision pursuant to a neutrality agreement. The Union erroneously relies 17 on Amalgamated Clothing & Textile Workers Union, AFL-CIO v. Facetglas, Inc. (4th Cir. 1988) 845
18 F.2d 1250, contending that the court enforced an election agreement which prohibited discriminatory 19 discharges even though the union did not represent employees. Facetglas, however, does not stand 20 for this proposition. In Facetglas, the Union brought breach of contract claims against an employer 21 over a wage agreement and an election agreement. The court addressed jurisdictional issues of the 22 Board and the court, and the court remanded the case for further determination on whether specific 23 claims arising from an alleged breach of the election agreement could be resolved without resolving 24 representational issues. Id. at 1253. The court did not, however, make any finding regarding the 25 propriety of the Union’s request for damages and the reinstatement of two employees. Id. (“Further, 26 the Union seeks monetary damages and reinstatement of two employees, not a new election. To the 27 extent that appropriate relief, if any, may be determined without deciding the ultimate outcome of 28 the election, the district court is the proper forum.”) (Emphasis added.)

1 Facetglas is also inapplicable to the dispute in this case because there is no election 2 agreement.<sup>11</sup> In addition, the Union’s sole claim for relief is a petition compelling arbitration; the 3 Union does not seek monetary damages and/or reinstatement of employees pursuant to a breach of 4 contract claim. Moreover, while the election agreement in Facetglas contained a provision 5 governing the employer’s hiring decisions, there is no express or implied provision in the MOA that 6 remotely relates to the Tribe’s employment decision making.

7 Neutrality agreements such as the MOA generally provide the framework for the 8 representation process and may set forth provisions only to take effect if the union obtains majority 9 status and becomes the exclusive representative of employees. See Snow & Sons (9th Cir. 1962) 134
 10 N.L.R.B. 709, enforced, 308 F.2d 687 (the NLRB will enforce voluntary recognition agreements 11 where the employer agrees to a private alternative to a Board election and, as a result of that 12 alternative procedure, has knowledge of the union's majority status); Hotel & Restaurant Employees 13 Union Local 217 v. J.P. Morgan Hotel (2d. Cir. 1993) 996 F.2d 561 (employer and union entered 14 into contract to govern conduct during union organizational campaign). Unlike collective bargaining 15 agreements, neutrality agreements do not evidence a contract reached after the union has obtained 16 majority status and after extensive bargaining negotiations between the parties. Simply put, 17 neutrality agreements like the MOA are not collective bargaining agreements and cannot be treated 18 as such. Ibid.

19 Dana Corp. and International Union (Dec. 6, 2010) 356 N.L.R.B. No. 49, 2010 WL
 20 4963202, is particularly instructive here. In Dana Corp., the National Labor Relations Board 21 considered the terms of a neutrality agreement and provided certain factors that, if found, would 22 demonstrate a violation of Section 8(a)(2). Specifically, the Board opined that if a union purported
 23 to speak for the employees or was treated as if it did, Section 8(a)(2) was violated; if the neutrality 24 agreement affected existing terms and conditions of employment or obligated the employer to 25 violate such terms and conditions, it violated Section 8(a)(2); or if the neutrality agreement, its

26
 27
 28 <sup>11</sup> The MOA provides for a card-check procedure to determine whether employees elect the Union as their exclusive bargaining representative.

1 context, or the parties' conduct would reasonably lead employees to believe recognition of the union 2 was a foregone conclusion, Section 8(a)(2) was violated. Id.

3 Here, Section 10 of the MOA contains a provision regarding arbitration of "disputes over the 4 interpretation or application of [the] Agreement." (See Complaint, Exhibit A, MOA, Section 10.) 5 The Union attempts to mischaracterize the employment termination decisions of two employees as 6 an alleged violation of paragraph 5 of the MOA. In so doing, the Union is attempting to not only 7 circumvent the employment procedures set forth in tribal law, but violate longstanding federal law at 8 the same time. Indeed, any arbitration of an employment termination decision would most certainly 9 violate the factors identified in Dana Corp. Arbitrating the propriety of the two employee 10 terminations indicates to Tribal employees that the Union already represents them and is able to 11 petition on their behalf, without complying with the card check process set forth in the MOA and in 12 compliance with the NLRA.

13 Arbitrating these two Tribal employment matters also gives the (false) impression that union 14 representation is either inevitable or already in effect. The requested grievance arbitration forces the 15 Tribe to treat the Union as if it speaks on behalf of its employees and will undoubtedly affect the 16 existing terms and conditions of the employment relationship. Any such bargaining should only 17 follow actual recognition pursuant to the terms of the MOA. See Dana Corp., 356 N.L.R.B. No. 49, 18 2010 WL 4963202 at *9. Importantly, there is little doubt that proceeding with arbitration would 19 "reasonably [lead] employees to believe that recognition of [the Union] is a foregone conclusion."
20 See id.

21 Certainly, there can be no more forceful evidence of a purpose to exclude employment 22 termination decisions from arbitration than the violation of federal law. See Kaiser Steel Corp. v.
23 Mullins (1982) 455 U.S. 72, 83 ("...a federal court has a duty to determine whether a contract 24 violates federal law before enforcing it"). Adopting the Union's posture on the arbitrability of 25 employment termination decisions violates Section 8(a)(2) of the NLRA.

26 5. The Second and Thirteenth Affirmative Defenses

27 The Tribe's second and thirteenth affirmative defenses allege that the Union lacks standing to 28 arbitrate internal personnel decisions of the Tribe and that Mr. Garrigues and Mr. Bond are not

1 parties to the MOA. As set forth above in Part B(3) (see supra), the Union is not the exclusive 2 bargaining representative of employees, cannot bargain over the terms and conditions of 3 employment, and thus has no standing to arbitrate the propriety of termination decisions of 4 employees it does not represent.

5 6. The Fourth and Ninth Affirmative Defenses

6 The Tribe's fourth affirmative defense alleges that proceeding with an arbitration regarding 7 employment termination decision violates the NLRA and tribal law, including the Tribal Labor 8 Relations Ordinance ("TLRO"). The Tribe's ninth affirmative defense alleges that employees can 9 only bring claims regarding discipline and/or termination decisions by following tribal law 10 procedures and Mr. Garrigues and Mr. Bond have not followed such procedures in this case.

11 Here, the Union argues that tribal law is irrelevant and that in any event, the TLRO requires 12 arbitration of disputes. As an initial matter, the MOA expressly refers to the TLRO and compliance 13 with the TLRO throughout the agreement, including the arbitration provision.<sup>12</sup> (See Complaint, 14 Exhibit A, MOA, Section 10 ("The arbitrator shall follow the arbitration procedures prescribed in the 15 TLRO [...] The Parties hereto agree to comply with any order of the arbitrator, which shall be final 16 and binding, and shall be enforceable as provided in the TLRO.") Moreover, the TLRO requires 17 arbitration of certain matters, including matters relating to organizing and election procedures, as 18 well as matters after a union has obtained majority status, such as alleged unfair labor practices and 19 discharge of employees. (See Complaint, Exhibit B, TLRO, Section 13.) Again, the Union does not 20 represent the Tribe's employees at present time. Contrary to the Union's contention, the TLRO does 21 not require arbitration of employment termination decisions under the MOA.

22 Moreover, a discharged employee must exhaust the grievance procedures provided by a 23 collective bargaining agreement before seeking direct legal redress. Edwards v. Teamsters Local 24 Union No. 36, Bldg. Material & Dump Truck Drivers (9th Cir. 1983) 719 F.2d 1036, 1038 (citing 25

26 <sup>12</sup> The U.S. Supreme Court has also been careful to protect the principle of tribal sovereignty and 27 that Indian tribes possess broad powers of self-governance. See e.g., Merrion v. Jicarilla Apache 28 Tribe, (1982) 455 U.S. 130, 169 (recognizing substantive tribal law may be enforced in tribal courts).

1 Republic Steel Corp. v. Maddox (1965) 379 U.S. 650).<sup>13</sup> Mr. Garrigues and Mr. Bond, the two 2 employees whose employment terminations the Union seeks to challenge, are not parties to the 3 MOA and have not exhausted their remedies in accordance with the procedures set forth in tribal 4 law. The Union does not and cannot refute this.

5 IV. CONCLUSION

6 The Tribe has alleged affirmative defenses that defeat the Union's requested relief for an 7 order compelling arbitration. The Union has also failed to meet its burden in demonstrating that the 8 Tribe's affirmative defenses are irrelevant to this matter and that they lack merit under the facts the 9 Tribe alleges. Accordingly, the Union's motion for judgment on the pleadings and motion to strike 10 the Tribe's affirmative defenses must be denied.
